8. Registration of Premises and Skin Piercers relating to the activities of Body piercing and Semi-Permanent Skin-Colouring

Emma Credland, Environmental Health Officer:

- a) presented a report to the committee to seek approval to update the current bylaws regarding tattooing, acupuncture, cosmetic piercing (including ear piercing), electrolysis and semi-permanent skin-colouring under one set of consolidated model Byelaws
- b) explained that the proposed update to the skin piercing Byelaws was to expand the definition of 'ear piercing' to include 'semi-permanent' make-up and cosmetic (body) piercing and introduce a 'variation of existing registration fee'. This update would allow the registration of such activities and aid in regulation of these activities and would allow cost recovery for Officer time spent re-issuing skin piercing registrations
- c) highlighted that it was important that this industry was effectively regulated due to the risks associated with the treatments offered. There was the potential risk of transmission of Blood Borne Viruses (BBV) such as Hepatitis B and C and HIV, as well as other infections, and potential physical damage and bleeding if treatment was completed incorrectly. The recommendations would ensure greater protection to those undergoing these treatments by ensuring that businesses providing any of the aforementioned treatments operated hygienically and in a manner which would minimise the risk of infection to their customers
- d) referred to the proposed draft Byelaws as set out in Appendix A of the report
- e) invited members questions and comments.

Question: Had there been any evidence of things going wrong with body piercing?

Response: Not locally. Nationally there had been an incident involving a young girl with an ear piercing.

Question: What was the definition of semi-permanent brows?

Response: It involved a small blade piercing the skin providing a hair effect on the brow area. It was popular with people who lacked in hair altogether.

Question: Was there any cost involved in altering the Byelaws?

Response: None other than Officer time. It would introduce the ability to change the facilities of a premises and it would require the individual carrying out the activity to have their certificate updated.

Question: How would the City of Lincoln Council track down businesses that were currently operating?

Response: Some businesses had been in touch and had given us their contact details. The majority of advertising would be through social media which would help officers gauge whether businesses were operating unlawfully.

Question: Was there an annual fee that had to be paid?

Response: No, only a one off registration fee would be required at the beginning. An applicant would need to re-apply and pay a new fee if they moved to another authority.

Question: Were there many premises operating unlawfully?

Response: Unfortunately, yes and the local authority would only find out about them if something went wrong.

Question: If something did go wrong, would the Council be liable?

Response: The individual would put a claim in against the business and Officers would investigate it. If they had registered with the Council it was assumed that they had met the Byelaws. If not, it would need to be investigated as a separate matter.

Question: If the owner of a premises that was already registered wanted to expand the business, would the premises need to re-register?

Response: It would be dealt with on a case by case basis depending on what and where they were moving to. A full visit may need to be carried out to determine the outcome.
